Knowledge, evidence and practice

- Improve patient outcome through treatments and care practices (e.g. drugs or procedures)
- Develop and improve services (e.g. palliative care service or diabetes community nurse)
- Support equity and access to healthcare (e.g. special needs groups)

Presumes that we have access to and use relevant information and evidence

Issues relating to evidence and palliative care

- Palliative care is an emerging discipline
 - Multidisciplinary base
 - Different care providers and site of care
 - Patient and family as unit of care
 - Bereavement, grief and loss
 - Transitions and movements
- Evidence development can be difficult
 - Historical and social barriers to doing research with death and dying
 - Lack of a research culture, infrastructure
 - Funding difficulties
 - Clinical load of staff
 - Methodological considerations

What is CareSearch?

- A website, a project and a resource for those involved in providing palliative care
- Funded by Department of Health and Ageing
- “One stop” shop for palliative care information, evidence and resources
- Website as both a product and an entry point
- Designed for those providing palliative care and those affected by palliative care.

Welcome to CareSearch. CareSearch is an online resource of palliative care information and evidence. All materials included in this website are reviewed for quality and relevance.

For Patients, Carers, Families & Friends

Palliative care will affect all of us at some stage in our lives as a patient, carer, family member, neighbour or friend. The following resources may help.

*For Patients
For Carers
For Families & Friends
State Based Resources
National Palliative Care Program*

For Health Care Providers

There are different disciplines and individuals involved in providing palliative care. These resources provide information and resources for health care professionals.

*General Practitioners
Health Care Providers
Education and Training

USEFUL INFORMATION

DO YOU NEED HELP NOW?

Patients

Having a life limiting illness changes things. The focus of care changes from curing a disease to helping patients have the best quality of life possible while managing their symptoms. There may be questions that you want to ask and to have answered. There may be information that you want to access. There are many things that you can do to help you understand what is happening and be more in control.

The pages are not intended to replace the care or advice of your health professionals. They provide a set of resources that may help you learn more and access materials that could help you manage better.

The following pages have been written specifically for patients.

- Understanding palliative care
- Your health care team and you
- Living with illness
- Having difficult conversations
- Being prepared for end-of-life decisions
- Feelings and emotions
- Your carer and family
- Are things changing?
- At the end

Help when caring at home

Nursing an ill person at home creates over time, a mini-hospital atmosphere. You will be helped by your health team with the delivery of various types of equipment. This can help make your ill family member feel more comfortable and equally importantly, help you care more safely and easily. It is important for you to continue to keep talking with your health team, especially about the most useful equipment for your situation.

While services differ from state to state and region to region, a surprisingly wide variety of help is often available – from local councils, local hospitals, regional community and health centres, Cancer Councils and various local voluntary bodies. This can include the loan of equipment and other practical items. Many of these services can be found in the National Resources and State Resources pages.

There may also be volunteer help from people who have been through your experience. They can be part of the local hospice or palliative care service.

Medicines and patient care

For those with a serious illness, managing medicines is an important task. There are many products now available at the local pharmacy. It is also possible that, with a GP script, they may count towards your PBS entitlements. Members of the health team can assist with this matter.

There are also online resources that can help you with practical aspects of patient care.

Transport

Even when patients are seriously ill, they benefit from specialist medical review in the clinic setting. Over time, access may become difficult. Consider getting a disability sticker for motor vehicles. This will allow you to park in special parking bays near your medical clinic.

There are also transport issues that can be investigated.

Introduction

There are an increasing number of online teaching resources in palliative care. These vary in relation to:

- Their intended audience
- The detail in which content is covered
- Whether they are accredited for use in continuing professional education
- Whether they require registration and / or a fee.

Some are fully developed educational programs with training and self-evaluation activities, some are compendia of teaching materials or powerpoint slides on relevant topics, and a few are discussion starters.

Modules included on this list have been appraised for the quality of their content, and their relevance for palliative care. If there are other resources that should be included in this list, please contact the CareSearch team and let us know!

PubMed palliative care searches

These searches are designed to give you immediate access to subject-specific literature available in PubMed. When you select a search, PubMed retrieves current citations from the biomedical literature databases maintained by the National Library of Medicine. (See NCBI disclaimer and copyright notice)

Typically searches use 1-2 key medical subject headings and text words, and are restricted to palliative care. Eight different search variations per subject are available to help you explore the literature. A sensitive search is a broad search, whereas a specific search is narrower. All searches have been restricted to English language, and to humans.

They are a good starting point but they are not comprehensive, and have not been validated. After searching, always check the PubMed 'details' tag on the screen to verify that you are satisfied with the approach taken. You can then modify the search if required. Some searches may currently yield zero results, but this should change over time as new citations are added to PubMed.

CareSearch and OSWA – Now

- Patient and carer pages (useful info by state)
- Page in health professional groups
- Include abstracts on non-indexed databases- palliative relevant theses, conference abstracts,
- Research activities – access to RDMS, research register

CareSearch and OSWA – future

- Geographically distributed virtual communities
- Consolidating specialist literature and policy
- Discipline specific communications and also from discipline to clinical community communications
- Capacity building through education, networks
- Cooperative base consumers and health professionals
